More than 80% of all electronics that EcoPhones receives are reusable and are therefore tested, reconditioned and sold in the United States. The revenues generated from the resale of used consumer electronics help pay for our warehouse rent, our repair technicians and our ability to pay schools and churches for an ever increasing number and variety of used and eventually hazardous consumer electronics.

The remaining 20% is de-manufactured abroad in Antwerp, Belgium at one of the world's leading precious metals refineries. Unlike many Asian nations that lack the necessary environmental infrastructure and laws, Belgium and the European Union possess the world's most advanced environmental technologies and are governed by the European Union's 2003 directive on Waste Electrical and Electronic Equipment (WEEE).
